The Prophet Motif: Meeting the Divine Challenge today

Who is a Prophet?

What is prophecy?

Are there messages for us today, and how might we recognise them?

All Abrahamic faiths are rooted in revelation, with particular individuals accepting God's call to deliver a message and to challenge people with that message.

However there are subtle differences and special understandings of prophecy in each Abrahamic faith that influences the way we experience the divine challenge and our aspirations to follow God's will. Is prophecy just in the past? Can there be prophecy now? If so, what is the message today? What sort of people were prophets?

Dinner during 2011 Winter Conference

This conference will explore the historical, social and spiritual dimensions of prophets and how we might hear God's voice and meet the divine challenge for our own times in a variety of different ways and with the unique JCMA mix of studying, discussing, praying, eating and sharing as we get to meet each other as people of faith in Australia.

JCMA aims to enable people of faith to deepen their understanding of Judaism, Christianity and Islam in Australia today by meeting, engaging with and learning from Jews, Christians and Muslims.

Why a JCMA?

JCMA was established to provide opportunities for people of each of the Abrahamic faiths to explore inter-faith dialogue within Australia's multicultural community. For those already committed to such programs it complements that commitment with a deeper understanding of Judaism, Christianity and Islam gained by engaging with, and learning from, one another.

Who is it for?

JCMA conferences are intended for anyone from one of the three Abrahamic faiths. Participants include men and women, academics, those working in support or welfare roles, tertiary students and members and leaders of faith communities.

Apart from Sunday Tasters, you are encouraged to be in residence for the full conference
