Recognising Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people in the Constitution

As Australians, we all want to be recognised and treated as equals. The Constitution, the highest legal document in Australia, does not recognise Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people as Australia's First People and continues to have sections that permit discrimination on the basis of race.

"Until that (constitutional recognition) is addressed, then we truly can't go forward as a people, as a nation, as Australians, as a whole."

Archie Roach, gifted singer/songwriter and storyteller

Together, we can help repair the long exclusion of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples in the Constitution, and put this right.

"We're gathered to take a remarkable step forward. Forward to a nation that acknowledges its history, its heritage in its founding document. Forward to a nation who stands up to be counted as opponents of racism and proponents of recognition."

The Father of Reconciliation, Pat Dodson

The Conversation to be held at Sheila Inc Design Centre, 52-54 Binney St., Euroa at 6.30 p.m. on March 14th will be hosted by Shepparton Region Reconciliation Group and funded by You Me Unity. You Me Unity is the people's movement to recognise Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples and cultures in Australia's Constitution. To find out more go to : www.youmeunity.org.au.

Nibblies will be provided.
